Indirect Mideast Talks Set

U.N. to mediate negotiations for release of Israeli soldiers

JIDDAH, SAUDI ARABIA | U.N. chief Kofi Annan said Monday he would appoint a mediator for indirect talks between Israel and Hezbollah on the release of two abducted Israeli soldiers, the first public word of negotiations between the bitter enemies since fighting in Lebanon ended.

The announcement raised the possibility of a prisoner swap to win the soldiers' release, an exchange that Israel has repeatedly rejected, at least in public. Until now, Israel had insisted that it would not have any contact with Hezbollah, but its government has been under increasing domestic pressure to bring the two home.

Annan

The agreement on the mediation effort could mark a breakthrough on an issue that is crucial to preserving the fragile three-week-old cease-fire that ended 34 days of Israel-Hezbollah fighting. Israel mounted its offensive in Lebanon after the Shiite guerrillas seized the two soldiers and killed three others in a cross-border raid July 12.

The U.N. cease-fire resolution that ended the fighting on Aug. 14 urges the unconditional release of the two soldiers. Hezbollah has said it would free them only in a swap for Arab prisoners held by Israel.

Israel on Monday repeated its stance demanding an unconditional release of the soldiers. DONNA ABU-NASR

Big Benedict

Farmers in Munich, Germany, are looking to give Pope Benedict XVI something to Holy See. The image of the pope — not yet finished on Sunday — is being put into a wheat field near Franz Josef Strauss Airport. The picture, created with straw, soil, chalk and lawn marker color and the words “Bavaria greets Benedict XVI,” will welcome the pontiff during his approach to the airport. Benedict XVI will visit the German state of Bavaria Sept. 9-14. (EXPRESS)

Stamp of Disapproval

The Postal Service is issuing a new set of stamps depicting motorcycles; collectors who buy copies issued on the first day the stamps are available can get them with a special commemorative postmark. Unfortunately, the colorful postmark spells it "motorcyle." Having discovered this, the Postal Service announced Friday that new orders for first-day envelopes will have a corrected postmark — unless the buyer wants it spelled wrong, in which case he or she can order an incorrect version. Officials: Candles Caused Apartment Fire That Killed 6

Candles used for light in an apartment without electricity probably caused a fire that killed six children inside, a fire department official said Monday as fire investigators continued sifting through debris. Bush: Oil Dependence Hurts Growth

President promises to help keep U.S. workers competitive in markets

PINEY POINT, M.D. | President Bush marked Labor Day on Monday by promising to help keep U.S. workers competitive in global markets and reduce U.S. reliance on foreign oil so it doesn't choke U.S. economic expansion.

"Dependence on foreign oil jeopardizes our capacity to grow," Bush said in a speech focused on the U.S. economy — a key issue in November elections that will determine whether the GOP retains control of the House and Senate.

Democrats contend the middle class isn't enjoying the benefits of recent U.S. economic gains. They

Study: Older Dads Up Risk of Autism

Fathers after 40 much more likely to have a child with disorder

CHICAGO | Men who become fathers in their 40s or older are much more likely to have autistic children than younger dads, a new study released Monday shows, bolstering evidence that genetics contributes to the mental disorder.

The research involved about 130,000 Israeli Jews born in the 1980s. Those fathered by older men were almost six times more likely to have autism or related disorders than those fathered by men younger than 30, and more than one-and-a-half times more likely than children fathered by men ages 30-39.

The mothers' age at childbirth appeared to have little impact on autism, although the researchers said they couldn't rule out "a possible small effect" from the oldest mothers.

Autism experts called the study intriguing but not definitive, and the authors said the results need to be tested in a broader population to see if similar findings would occur in other ethnic groups.

It's not the first time fathers' age has been implicated in autism, but the new research stands out because "it's a strong effect in a carefully designed study," said Dr. Edwin Cook, an autism researcher at University of Illinois-Chicago who was not involved in the study.

Autism is a developmental disorder that involves an impaired ability to socialize and communicate.

Labor Day Rallies Draw Thousands

SAN FRANCISCO | In far smaller numbers than they did this spring, supporters of illegal immigrants marched in several U.S. cities Monday, calling for illegal immigrants to be given the chance to live and work freely in the United States.

Crowd estimates for Labor Day rallies in cities ranged from the hundreds to the low thousands. (AP)

Tropical depression threatens to grow into Hurricane Florence

MIAMI | A tropical depression brewing over the open Atlantic was nearing tropical storm strength Monday morning, forecasters said.

At 5 p.m. EDT, the depression had sustained winds near 35 mph, 4 mph shy of becoming a tropical storm and the sixth named storm of the Atlantic hurricane season, according to the National Hurricane Center. The depression would be named Florence if it reaches tropical storm strength. Forecasters said it could become a tropical storm Tuesday.

It comes on the heels of Tropical Storm Ernesto, which was briefly the season's first Atlantic hurricane.

Ernesto hit the U.S. mainland at tropical storm strength, first moving over Florida, then swinging out to sea before hitting the Carolinas just short of hurricane strength last week. The storm and its remnants wreaked havoc along the East Coast, tearing down tree limbs and power lines and flooding low-lying areas.

About 9,000 homes and business in Connecticut were still without power Monday morning because of the storm. In New York's Westchester County, just north of New York City, 19,000 customers were without power, and residents of Yonkers were advised to boil water because of a power outage at a reservoir. (AP)

Katie Couric and Bob Schieffer appear during a tribute to Schieffer on his last broadcast as anchor from the CBS News Broadcast Center in New York last week.

Couric Takes Over as Anchor for CBS News

Tuesday night marks the debut for 15-year 'Today' show veteran

NEW YORK | With a rebuilt newsroom behind her and new theme music from an Academy Award-winning composer, Katie Couric is set to make the most talked-about debut of the fall television season Tuesday on the "CBS Evening News."

CBS hopes that many of the viewers who watched Couric in the morning during her 15 years at NBC's "Today" show will stay with her in the evening, lifting a broadcast that has spent several years in the ratings basement.

Tuesday caps a tumultuous two years for network evening newscasts. For more than two decades, the networks had featured Tom Brokaw, Peter Jennings and Dan Rather. Now, Couric will compete against Brian Williams at the top-rated NBC "Nightly News" and Charles Gibson at ABC's "World News."

CBS this summer rebuilt the newsroom that will be used as Couric's set. James Horner, who composed the music for "Titanic," wrote new music for the evening news theme. Couric even went on a six-city "listening tour" to hear what viewers want on the news. DAVID BAUDER (AP)

Jury Selection For R.I. Nightclub Fire Trial Begins

WEST WARWICK, R.I. | The man whose fireworks display set off a 2003 blaze that killed 100 concertgoers is sitting in prison, but for many victims' relatives, the first of the two most important trials in the case is only now about to begin.

Jury selection begins Tuesday for Michael Derderian, who with his brother owned The Station, the one-story, wooden nightclub that quickly became a deathtrap when stage pyrotechnics ignited the sound-proofing foam that covered its walls and ceiling.

Still fiercely angry more than three years after the fire, victims' relatives see the Derderians as penny-pinchers who created unsafe conditions and have never shown the same remorse as the man whose pyrotechnics started the fire.

Daniel Biechele, now serving four years in prison, was tour manager for the band Great White. Biechele pleaded guilty and tearfully apologized in court in May. (AP)

Harris Stumbles on in Fla.

Despite her troubled campaign, candidate poised for primary win

TALLAHASSEE, FLA. | Disaster may not be too strong a word for Rep. Katherine Harris' Senate campaign. Her makeup and formfitting clothes are mocked on national TV. Her flirty interview style embarrasses her campaign handlers. Staffers keep quitting in despair.

She's been linked to a shady defense contractor, caught in fibs and scolded for telling voters that non-Christian politicians "legislate sin." Yet, on the strength of her name recognition, Harris is expected to win Florida's GOP Senate nomination on Tuesday, to the chagrin of many Republicans.

"This campaign will go down in history as one of the most disastrous ever run in the United States," declares Jim Dornan, who helped launch Harris' bid as her campaign manager. He left three months later,

Republicans in Washington and Florida tried to recruit someone notable to enter the primary against Harris, but those efforts failed. So Harris is expected to walk away with the nomination against three political unknowns.

That would leave Republicans — who want to oust first-term Democratic Sen. Bill Nelson in November — to hope that Harris can rebuild her wobbly campaign.

More Than 30 Bodies Found in Iraq

Bullet-ridden corpses bear signs of torture; 7 coalition troops die

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Police found the tortured, blindfolded bodies of 33 men scattered across the capital Monday and the U.S.-led coalition reported combat deaths of seven servicemen, a day after Iraqi leaders said the capture of a top terror suspect would reduce violence.

Kidnappers also dragged off a popular soccer star in Baghdad, while a security crackdown in the city expanded into the upscale Mansour neighborhood.

An al-Qaeda-affiliated group dismissed the Iraqi government's claim that the organization's second most important leader had been arrested, suggesting the man was not a senior figure and denying the terror group had suffered a significant blow.

Police said the 33 bullet-riddled bodies all showed signs of torture and had their hands and feet bound. The men had been dumped around several neighborhoods, police said.

Men secure a coffin to the top of a car outside a morgue in Baqubah, Iraq.

Two other bodies were found dumped on a highway in Kut. Both had been shot in the head and chest, said Maamoun Ajil al-Robaiei at Kut hospital's morgue.

The U.S.-led coalition said seven of its personnel had been killed in the past two days — five Americans and two Britons.

Additionally, assailants abducted Ghanim Ghudayer, a soccer star and member of Iraq's Olympic team. The 22-year-old was taken Sunday evening by unknown assailants, some of whom were wearing military uniforms, police said. (AP)

TOURIST TARGET: Jordanian police secure the area around the amphitheater where foreign tourists were attacked by a gunman.

British Tourist Dies in Jordan Attack

Gunman opens fire on Westerners visiting popular Roman ruins

AMMAN, JORDAN | A gunman opened fire on Western tourists at Roman ruins in the heart of Jordan's capital Monday, killing a British man and wounding six people before being overpowered. Police said the attacker came from the same area as the slain leader of al-Qaeda in Iraq.

The attack at an ancient amphitheater came despite a clampdown on security in this key U.S. ally since a string of deadly bombings at hotels last November that al-Qaeda in Iraq claimed to have staged.

Police were trying to determine whether the person alleged to be the gunman, Nabeel Ahmed Issa Jaourah, was enticed by Islamic militants or a terror group to carry out the shooting, said a Jordanian security official, who agreed to discuss the investigation only if not quoted by name.

The official said Jaourah, 38, is from Rusaifa, a village outside Zarqa, the hometown of Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, the leader of al-Qaeda in Iraq who was killed June 7 when a U.S. warplane bombed his hideout in Iraq. Zarqa is an industrial town northeast of Amman that is a hub for extremist Muslims.

The attacker shouted, "God is great," in Arabic as he ran past the tourists, firing at them from behind. Then he turned around, facing them, and continued to shoot, the security official said.

He said bystanders helped two nearby tourist police capture the assailant, who tried to flee. (AP)

Canadian Killed in U.S. Strike

Soldier fighting Taliban forces dies in 'friendly fire' incident

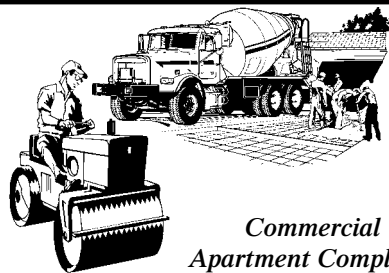

KANDAHAR, AFGHANISTAN | U.S. warplanes mistakenly fired on Canadian troops fighting Taliban forces Monday in southern Afghanistan, killing one soldier and wounding five in an operation that NATO said also has left 200 insurgents dead.

A British soldier attached to NATO and four Afghans also were killed in a suicide vehicle bombing Monday in Kabul, while 16 suspected Taliban militants and five Afghan police were killed elsewhere in the country.

The intense fighting comes amid Afghanistan's deadliest spate of violence since U.S.-led forces toppled the Taliban regime.

The "friendly fire" incident happened after ground troops battling Taliban militants requested air support, NATO said.

NATO said the International Security Assistance Force provided the support but "regrettably engaged friendly forces during a strafing run, using cannons." It later identified the planes as U.S. A-10 Thunderbolts. NOOR KHAN (AP)

Sudan Resists U.N. Troops

AU peacekeepers given a week to accept new terms or leave Darfur

KHARTOUM, SUDAN | Sudan said Monday that African Union peacekeepers will have to leave the war-torn Darfur region unless they accept a deal within a week that would effectively block a proposed U.N. peacekeeping force.

The deadline escalates the Khartoum regime's standoff with the United Nations over Darfur to a crisis point, pitting Sudanese determination to resist possible war crimes investigations against a U.N. push to take on a new, tough peacekeeping mission.

Many observers believe Sudan has dug in against U.N. deployment in the vast western region because it fears the force will hunt down officials and government allies suspected of war crimes for atrocities committed by nomadic Arab tribes on Darfur's ethnic African communities.

worsened in recent months, and U.N. officials warn that hundreds of thousands of people could die if aid operations collapse.

The African peacekeepers' mandate runs out Sept. 30, and last week the Security Council passed a resolution that would put the AU force under U.N. control, pending Sudan's consent. The government in Khartoum promptly rejected the resolution.

On Monday, Sudan went a step further. Foreign Minister Ali Ahmed Kerti said the AU force can remain in Darfur only if it accepts Arab League and Sudanese funding. He gave the African Union a week to agree or get its troops out, a government statement said. (AP)

Teen Charged in Therapist Slaying

Psychiatrist dead after an appointment with a young client

BETHESDA, MD. | A 19-year-old man was charged Monday with slaying a prominent psychiatrist and federal health official, Montgomery County police said.

Vitali A. Davydov, of North Potomac, was believed to be the only suspect in the case after Dr. Wayne

S. Fenton, 53, was found unconscious in his office Sunday after an appointment with the teen, police said. Davydov's father saw his son acting strangely outside the building after the appointment, found Fenton and called police, according to a statement from police.

In addition to seeing patients who were considered severely disturbed in his private practice, Fenton was associate director of the National Institute of Mental Health, a division of the National Institutes of Health. His death was described as devastating, not only to his friends but also for the advancement of mental health research.

"He was, without question, one of the nation's experts in schizophrenia," said Thomas R. Insel, director of the National Institute of Mental Health.

Insel said Fenton was leading a research effort to help make it possible for people with severe psychiatric disease to function in the community.

"I can't convey to you the extent of this loss," Insel said. "This was a huge loss for the nation." Schizophrenia afflicts about 2.5 million Americans, Insel said.

Fenton's body has been sent to the medical examiner. (AP)

Quick confession: Detectives say the teen told them that he killed Fenton with his fists. Today's Post, Metro

City Mulls Year-Round Schooling

Superintendent: Some students may benefit from longer schedule

WASHINGTON | Public Schools Superintendent Clifford B. Janey is proposing a year-round school year to help boost student achievement at some low-performing schools.

Under the proposal, five schools would likely add 20 days to the 180-day calendar, Janey said. He expects to select the schools by December, and at least three would be low-performing schools.

Nationally, the number of year-round schools has declined from 3,181 in 2003 to 2,850 this year, according to the National Association for Year-Round Education. The year-round model had its greatest boom in the 1990s.

The idea sparks debate between education experts, who cite studies showing knowledge loss among students over the summer, and parents who want downtime for their children.

"Students need parent time," said Cherita Whiting, who is on the board of the city PTA. (AP)

GREENBELT, MD. Station Open Again After Police Check Out Suitcase

Metro's Greenbelt station is open after a bomb squad disrupted a suspicious device in a suitcase. Metro officials said the station was closed after a man told police outside the station that a suitcase he was carrying had explosives inside. Police were tipped off by another passenger, who said the man had told him he had explosives in the suitcase while they were on a train from College Park. Police say the suitcase did not contain anything suspicious. The man and a woman who was with him were detained. (AP)

Gibbs Names 2 Second-String QBs

Unconventionally, both Campbell and Collins will back up Brunell

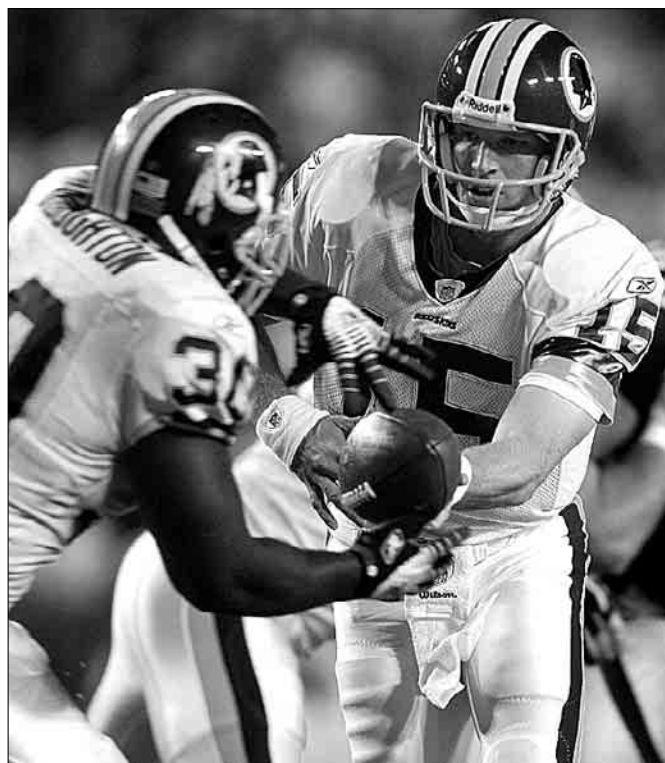

REDSKINS | Unable to settle on a clear No. 2 quarterback, Joe Gibbs is going to start the season with two — one reliever and one emergency starter.

The Redskins coach announced Monday that Todd Collins will take over if starter Mark Brunell is unable to finish a game, and that Jason Campbell will get the nod if Brunell is unable to play.

"If something should happen to Mark, then Todd would be the guy who finishes the game," Gibbs said. "If we have a whole week to go, and Mark couldn't start the next week, then Jason would start. I think it's the best way to go, mainly because we've got two real talented guys."

The unconventional plan is a split-the-middle verdict on one of the few contested battles of the Redskins preseason. Collins is a 13-year veteran who would find a demotion to No. 3 tough to swallow at this stage of his career, while Campbell was due for a promotion if he is to live up to his billing as the team's quarterback of the future.

Gibbs explained his decision by saying that Collins would have the veteran composure to enter a game with little preparation, whereas the young Campbell — with his arm strength and athleticism — is the better choice if given a full week of practice executing the game plan.

"In my honest opinion, Jason could go in right now and win football games for us," Gibbs said. "He can do things other guys can't."

That said, neither candidate is likely to strike fear into the hearts of defenders. Collins hasn't started a game since 1997 and hasn't thrown a regular season pass since going 1-for-5 in a pair of games in 2004. The Redskins traded three picks to Denver for the chance to move up and select Campbell in the first round of the draft last year, but he spent the entire season as the third quarterback behind Brunell and Patrick Ramsey and never played a down.

Still, in a city that loves its quarterback controversies, Gibbs' announcement was big news.

"Here in Washington, generally, whoever No. 2 is, the fans are going to want him," the coach said with a laugh. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Roddick Gets Best Of Becker

American wins easily, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3, against man who beat Agassi

TENNIS | Andy Roddick did what Andre Agassi couldn't: defeat Benjamin Becker and advance at the U.S. Open.

Roddick beat the 112th-ranked German qualifier 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 Monday to reach the quarterfinals, a day after Becker ended Agassi's career with a four-set victory in the third round.

Becker will always be remembered as the man who ended the Agassi era at this Open. But the day after he beat the beloved — and hobbled — former champion, he proved no match for an American star from his own generation.

Roddick, for his part, has turned to his elders. He has been tuning his game with Jimmy Connors — no stranger to U.S. Open success.

"It's been refreshing and invigorating," Roddick said. "I'm just surprised he said he would work with me, but I'm glad he did."

Roddick and No. 5 James Blake are the lone American men remaining in the draw. CONNOR ENNIS (AP)

McNair Raises Hopes in Baltimore

The Ravens' new QB brings leadership and playoff dreams to town

RAVENS | There's no overstating the enthusiasm that Steve McNair has generated among players and fans of the Baltimore Ravens.

Wide receiver Derrick Mason may have put it best: "Steve is a guy that's been through a lot in this league, a guy who's seen every look you can possibly give a quarterback, a guy who's been in every situation that you can possibly put a quarterback in," said Mason, McNair's former teammate in Tennessee.

"That's why everyone in the

Steve McNair was acquired by the Ravens in a June trade with the Titans.

city of Baltimore and the state of Maryland are very excited about the season."

Well, maybe not everyone. But there are plenty of people who believe McNair can turn the Ravens from a 6-10 team into a playoff contender.

For the first time in years, it appears that the Ravens won't have to depend solely on their defense and running game to win. McNair has far more impressive credentials than Elvis Grbac, Jeff Blake and Kyle Boller, quarterbacks who have tried — and failed — to carry the Ravens to the Super Bowl.

McNair, obtained in a June trade with the Tennessee Titans, has been to three Pro Bowls. He was the NFL co-MVP in 2003.

"You add somebody like Steve, it can change the whole complex of your offense," Mason said. "It brings another dimension that some teams might not have seen last year."

Mason joined the Ravens last season after teaming with McNair for eight years in Tennessee. Mason caught 86 passes for 1,073 yards in 2005, but scored only three touchdowns. That number should rise significantly this season, because McNair has a knack for finding the open man and the Ravens have a solid receiving corps that give him plenty of options.

"You're excited every year just because of the possibilities, but this year especially shows a lot of promise," tight end Todd Heap said. (AP)

BASEBALL | For a team that overcame an 11-31 start, a five-run deficit was nothing.

The resilient Florida Marlins became the first club in major-league history to climb above .500 after being 20 games under, rallying Monday to beat reeling Arizona 8-5.

"I don't think we're surprised at what we're doing," closer Joe Borowski said. "But I'm sure everybody else is shocked."

Florida began the day trailing NL wild-card leader San Diego by two games. STEVEN WINE (AP)

Woods Stays Unstoppable

2 eagles and 2 birdies cap early comeback in 5th straight Tour win

GOLF | What began as a rally quickly turned into a rout for Tiger Woods, who matched the lowest final round of his career Monday in the Deutsche Bank Championship to win for the fifth straight time on the PGA Tour.

With a splendid array of shots and key putts, Woods crushed Vijay Singh's spirit on his way to an 8-under 63, turning a three-shot deficit into a two-shot victory for his longest winning streak in a season.

The streak began in July with a victory in the British Open, his first since his father died in May. It continued on a sunny afternoon outside Boston with some of his best golf of the year and allowed him to avenge a loss to Singh at this tournament two years ago.

Woods needed only three holes to erase the deficit, including a 7-iron over a marsh and into 10 feet for eagle at No. 2. He pulled ahead with a 25-foot birdie putt at No. 5, and he seized control with a 3-wood from 266 yards, a piercing shot into a gentle breeze that banged into the slope fronting the green and stopped 10 feet away for another eagle.

He played his first seven holes in 6 under par, and Singh never got closer than two shots the rest of the way.

"Tiger played unbelievable," Singh said. "He made two eagles and just took it away."

Byron Nelson won 11 straight tournaments in 1945, a streak regarded as one of the most untouchable in sports.

Woods won six straight at the end of 1999 and the start of 2000, and Ben Hogan won six in a row in 1948.

Woods now takes a week off before heading to England for the HSBC World Match Play Championship, followed by the Ryder Cup.

His next PGA Tour start will be the American Express Championship outside London at the end of September.

Near No-No for Nats' Ortiz

Starter takes no-hitter into the 9th and belts his first HR in 4-1 win

NATIONALS | A near no-hitter? Yeah, that's worth smiling about. A first career home run? Now, there's a reason to celebrate.

Ramon Ortiz came within three outs of pitching the majors' first no-hitter in more than two years Monday, but it was his eighth-inning shot to the bullpen beyond the left field fence that had him practically giddy after the Washington Nationals' 4-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"When I see that ball's a homer, I say, 'Yes!' It's unbelievable. I can't sleep tonight," Ortiz said.

On the second pitch of the next inning, Ortiz left a fastball up in the strike zone to leadoff hitter Aaron Miles, who singled to center to end the 33-year-old Dominican's bid to become the first pitcher to throw a no-hitter since Randy Johnson's perfect game for the Arizona Diamondbacks on May 18, 2004.

"He came up short, but we decided it was worth a bottle of Dom anyway," said general manager Jim Bowden, shortly after presenting Ortiz with a bottle of the highbrow champagne.

Ortiz (10-12) certainly wasn't a likely candidate for a no-hitter. He had been 0-3 with a 11.43 ERA in his last four starts. He hadn't lasted more than seven innings all season because of his consistent high pitch-counts.

"You just have to give credit to Ortiz," St. Louis manager Tony LaRussa said. "He was better. He looked good the whole time. If you took strike one, he just got nastier and nastier." JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

LIVING THE WILD LIFE: Australian Prime Minister John Howard called the death of the "Crocodile Hunter" "a huge loss."

The Last Hunt

Celebrity adventurer Steve Irwin is felled by a stingray's barb

APPRECIATION | Steve Irwin died doing what he loved best, getting too close to one of the dangerous animals he dedicated his life to protecting.

The hugely popular Australian television personality and conservationist known as the "Crocodile Hunter" was killed Monday by a stingray while filming off the Great Barrier Reef. He was 44.

Irwin was at Batt Reef, off the remote coast of Queensland state, shooting a segment for a series called "Ocean's Deadliest" when he swam too close to one of the animals, which have a poisonous barb on their tails, his friend and colleague John Stainton said.

"He came on top of the stingray and the stingray's barb went up and into his chest and put a hole into his heart," said Stainton, who was on board Irwin's boat at the time.

Crew members aboard the boat, Croc One, called emergency services in the nearest city, Cairns, and administered CPR as they rushed the boat to nearby Low Isle to meet a rescue helicopter. Medical staff pronounced Irwin dead when they arrived a short time later.

Irwin was famous for his enthusiasm for wildlife and his catchword "Crikey!" in his television program "Crocodile Hunter." First broadcast in Australia in 1992, the program was picked up by the Discovery network, catapulting Irwin to international celebrity.

Irwin, who made a trademark of hovering dangerously close to untethered crocodiles and leaping onto their backs, spoke in rapid-fire bursts with a thick Australian accent and was almost never seen without his uniform of khaki shorts and shirt and heavy boots.

His ebullience was infectious and Australian officials sought him out for photo opportunities and to promote the country.

Irwin's public image was dented, however, in 2004 when he caused an uproar by holding his infant son in one arm while feeding large crocodiles inside a zoo pen. Irwin claimed at the time there was no danger to the child, and authorities declined to charge Irwin with violating safety regulations.

Stingrays have a serrated, toxin-loaded barb, or spine, on the top of their tail. The barb, which can be up to 10 inches long, flexes if a ray is frightened. Stings usually occur to people when they step on or swim too close to a ray and can be excruciatingly painful but are rarely fatal, said University of Queensland marine neuroscientist Shaun Collin.

Collin said he suspected Irwin died because the barb pierced under his ribcage and directly into his heart.

"It was extraordinarily bad luck. It's not easy to get spined by a stingray, and to be killed by one is very rare," Collin said. BRYAN CASSEY (AP)

ROCK IN A HARD PLACE: One would think a band consisting of three-quarters of politically minded Rage Against the Machine would want to rouse some rabble.

It's Time to Take Action

Audioslave should stop navel-gazing and start acting up

MUSIC | "The original fire has died and gone / but the riot inside moves on," Chris Cornell sings on the first single from Audioslave's third album, "Revelations" (Epic).

This might be the group's way of saying that those still hoping for a return of Rage Against the Machine's political punch, well, shouldn't.

Audioslave consists of three members of Rage, L.A.'s great agit-rock band, plus Soundgarden singer Cornell, and while the musicians certainly didn't form a new band in order to do the same old thing, their departure from overtly political commentary is disappointing in a world that could sorely use some rock-fueled editorializing.

"Revelations" does take a couple of shots at warmongers, but most of the struggles portrayed are internal. The album puts it across in more focused, less frilly fashion than its predecessor, "Out of Exile," mounting a rugged, soaring attack behind Tom Morello's guitar that evokes the blues-rock splendor of Paul Rodgers' late-1960s band Free.

It's not without its rewards, but with its pedigree, Audioslave should be doing more than spinning its wheels. RICHARD CROMELIN (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Uneasy Target

New documentary-style film portrays Bush's assassination

WHAT IF? A new film mixing archival footage and computer-generated special effects to portray the assassination of President Bush will premiere Sept. 10 at the Toronto Film Festival — and is already creating controversy.

British filmmaker Gabriel Range said "Death of a President" — which is done in a documentary style that has been described as eerily real — is intended to be a thought-provoking critique of the current political landscape.

"It's a striking premise," Range said in a statement. "But it's a serious film which I hope will open up the debate on where current U.S. foreign and domestic policies are taking us."

In the film, Bush prepares to deliver a speech to business leaders in Chicago, where he is confronted by a massive antiwar demonstration. Unperturbed, Bush goes ahead with the visit, but as he leaves the venue, he is gunned down by a sniper. While the nation mourns, FINAL MOMENTS: "Death," expected to air on TV soon in the U.K., is a British team's third pseudo-documentary about the consequences of horrific events.

the hunt for his killer — a Syrian-born gunman — swings into action. Range said he reviewed hundreds of hours of footage of Bush to make the film as realistic as possible.

A call to the White House for comment was not returned. Festival officials were unavailable for comment Thursday, but festival director Noah Cowan praised the film in a posting on the festival's Web site:

"This is easily the most dangerous and breathtakingly original film I have encountered this year."

And it may be the year's most hotly debated film as well: The public relations firm representing the movie has been flooded with calls from media around the globe, and blogs are already lighting up with debate about the subject matter.

By treating my high blood pressure,

I may be preventing its harmful effects.

Prevention. The overall goal in lowering high blood pressure is to prevent the development of other harmful effects. Even a slight decrease in blood pressure could have lasting effects on quality of life including lowering the chances of heart failure, stroke, heart attack and kidney failure.

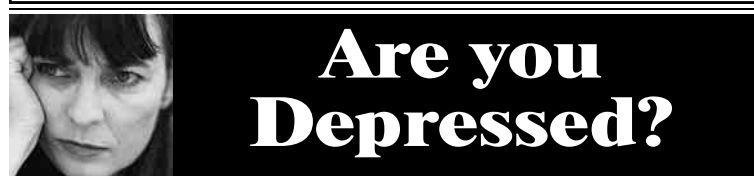

Our physicians are conducting a research study of the investigational use of approved medications, used in combination, to see if they effectively lower blood pressure.

Adults with high blood pressure who have never experienced heart failure, heart attack or stroke may qualify to participate.

All study related care is provided including physical examinations, laboratory services and study medications.

Resolve to Take Better Care of Your Type 2 Diabetes

All the healthy things you do add up. But sometimes they're still not enough to keep your blood sugar in control. A clinical research trial is studying how an investigational medication may give you better control of your type 2 diabetes.

To qualify, you must be:

- ☐ Between 18 and 80 years of age.
- ☐ Currently being treated for type 2 diabetes with one or more oral medications.
- ☐ NOT currently taking daily insulin.

Qualified participants will receive all study-related care and study medication at no cost, and may be compensated for time and travel.

A new season of tough cases — some even involve patients

RETURN | There's nothing like getting shot to brighten up a man's demeanor. Remember Tony Soprano getting all mushy and life's-a-gift after glimpsing the Other Side? On tonight's third-season premiere of "House" (9 p.m., Fox), the dour doctor recuperates from the gunshot that ended last season, and he has a new attitude — he's crankier than ever.

This time, he has three cases, as usual: A paralyzed man who had brain cancer some years ago rides his wheelchair into the family pool; a young woman becomes paralyzed during a yoga class; and House himself is at war with Cuddy over his treatment. He may still be hallucinating, as well.

DR. LOVE: House looks as grumpy as ever, but something seems to be missing.

Is the yoga girl a big faker? Will brain-cancer guy walk again? Will House be able to tap-dance? Is Cuddy preggers? Will Dr. Cameron give up on her Housecrush and pick on someone her own emotional size? Will Wilson be on the show a little more, exasperatedly keeping House in line? Will Foreman finally clock House in the mouth? Will Chase get a damn haircut? For a show that seems to have been smugly buying its own press for a season or so, "House" is still a watchable hour of fine TV. ARION BERGER (EXPRESS)

WE'RE HOT, AND WE'RE ARMED
STANDOFF (9 p.m., Fox) Ron Livingston plays Matt Flannery, a top hostage negotiator for the FBI's Crisis Negotiation Unit who's in over his head in an affair with his partner, Emily Lehman (Rosemarie DeWitt). This being TV, the CNU looks like it was staffed by a modeling agency.

DON'T EAT FIRST
NIP/TUCK (10 p.m., FX) enters its fourth season.

MY NETWORK, WITH BUBBLES
When the CW network combined affiliates from UPN and the WB, a few local stations were left unattached. Many of these have been corralled into MyNetwork, which launches today with the soap-opera-style dramas DESIRE

Healthy Adult VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

HIV is a global epidemic. Currently, 42 million people worldwide are living with HIV/AIDS, a disease that has no cure. In 2003, 5 million people were newly infected with HIV, equaling about 14,000 infections each day. Approximately 11 of every 1000 adults aged 15 to 49 worldwide, are HIV infected.

The world is in desperate need of a vaccine for the prevention of HIV infection.

Will you help?

Walter Reed Army Institute of Research and the Henry Jackson Foundation for the Advancement of Military Medicine are currently enrolling volunteers to participate in a study to evaluate the safety of a new investigational HIV vaccine.

If you are a healthy US citizen between the ages of 18-49, are not currently in the US military and are available for 12 months, you may be qualified to participate in a study evaluating this vaccine.

This experimental vaccine does not cause HIV infection.

Great Lakes cruises bring scenery, luxury inland to industry

A massive freighter towers over the Grande Mariner as the 183-foot-long cruise boat slips past the Detroit skyline en route to Mackinac Island.

By the time the Grande Mariner and its 65 passengers reach Chicago four days after seeing Detroit, they will have traveled through the Erie Canal and four of the five Great Lakes.

It's a journey of contrasts, with stops in reviving Rust Belt cities and quaint tourist towns, passing heavily industrialized stretches of the Detroit River and miles of unspoiled coastline.

The route is rich in history and natural beauty. And the trip is one of dozens of multi-day vacation cruises planned this year for the Great Lakes, from weeklong Lake Michigan coast excursions to fall leaf-peeping tours that stretch into the far northwest reaches of Lake Superior.

"It's just beautiful travel and beautiful scenery," said Roy Keith, the Grande Mariner's captain, who for the last decade has taken cruise ships onto the Great Lakes.

Largely dormant since the 1960s as international air travel and tropical cruises increased in popularity and affordability, the Great Lakes cruise tradition began a revival in the mid-1990s.

For travelers accustomed to the massive cruise ships of the Caribbean and Mediterranean, the Great Lakes boats are modest. The pace is easygoing, passengers get to know the crew on a first-name basis and the scenery is much of the attraction.

"When you travel by car, you've got to find those hot spots," says Ryan McMullen, cruise director on the Grande Mariner. "When you travel by water, you just have to sit back and watch those hot spots come by."

The trip on the Grande Mariner, which is owned by American Canadian Caribbean Cruise Line Inc. and can hold up to 100 passengers, began in the company's Warren, R.I., home port. The boat passed by New York City and traveled up the Hudson River, heading through the Erie Canal and stopping in cities along the way.

After visiting Buffalo and Rochester, N.Y., it headed to Cleveland before stopping in the Detroit suburb of Wyandotte. Since the Grande Mariner is so small, it can squeeze through the Erie Canal and dock in smaller communities like Wyandotte. Cost varies by cabin size, with prices for the 16-day trip ranging from $2,785 to $3,840.

The Grande Mariner spends the summer in Lake Michigan before returning to its home port for fall-color tours on the Erie Canal.

Tour options on different lines vary widely. Smaller boats carry up to 18 passengers on cruises that skirt Lake Ontario. And the MV Columbus — a 423-passenger ship designed especially for the Great Lakes — offers 11-day cruises between Toronto and Chicago that spend time in all five Great Lakes during prime fall-color season.

More than a half-dozen ships have cruises scheduled for this year. The Great Lakes Cruising Coalition said it would like to see about 60 of the about 130 cruise boats that can get to the Great Lakes via the St. Lawrence Seaway offer tours.

I, Robot Sommelier

Electronics

Japan's winebot can 'taste' wine, cheese and hors d'oeuvres

The ability to discern good wine from bad, name the specific brand from a tiny sip and recommend a complementary cheese would seem to be about as human a skill as there is.

In Japan, robots are doing it.

Researchers at NEC System Technologies and Mie University have designed a robot that can taste — an electromechanical sommelier able to identify dozens of different wines, cheeses and hors d'oeuvres.

"There are all kinds of robots out there doing many different things," said Hideo Shimazu, director of the NEC System Technology Research Laboratory and a joint leader of the robot project. "But we decided to focus on wine because that seemed like a real challenge."

All foods have a unique fingerprint. The robot uses that data to identify what it is inspecting right there on the spot."

HIDEO SHIMAZU
ROBOT PROJECT CO-LEADER

Last month, they unveiled the fruits of their two-year effort — a green-and-white prototype with eyes, a head that swivels and a mouth that lights up whenever the robot talks.

At the end of the robot's left arm is an infrared spectrometer. When objects are placed up against the sensor, the robot fires off a beam of infrared light. The reflected light is then analyzed in real time to determine the object's chemical composition.

"All foods have a unique fingerprint," Shimazu said. "The robot uses that data to identify what it is inspecting right there on the spot."

The winebot "tastes" using the infrared spectrometer at the base of its left arm.

When it has identified a wine, the robot speaks up in a childlike voice. It names the brand and adds a comment or two about the taste, such as whether it is a buttery chardonnay or a full-bodied shiraz, and what kinds of foods might go well on the side.

Shimazu said the robots could be "personalized," or programmed to recognize the kinds of wines its owner prefers and recommend new varieties to fit its owner's taste. Because it is analyzing the chemical composition of the wine or food placed before it, the robot can also alert its owner to possible health issues, gently warning against fatty or salty products.

That capability has other useful applications. Given three ripe, identical-looking apples to analyze, the robot was able to correctly single out one as sweet and the other two as a bit sour.

Of the thousands of wines on the market, the robot can be programmed to accurately identify only a few dozen at most. Some of the mistakes it makes would get a human sommelier fired.

When a reporter's hand was placed against the robot's taste sensor, it was identified as prosciutto. A cameraman was mistaken for bacon.

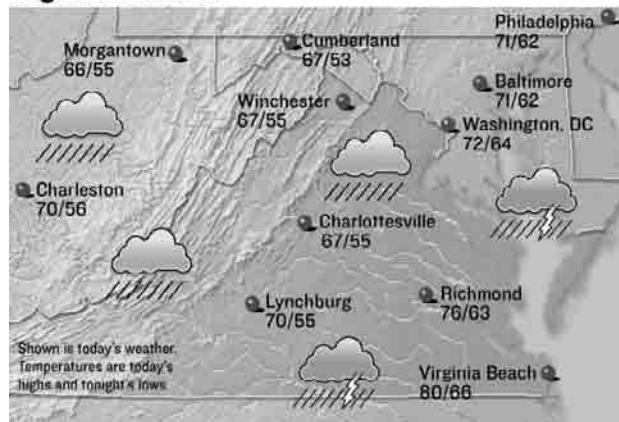

The 2-foot-tall robot also is expensive. "Buying one of these would cost about as much as a new car," Shimazu said. "We'd like to bring that down to 100,000 yen (US $1,000) or less for the tasting sensor, if we were to put it on the market."

He said there is no plan yet to actually market the robot, though the sensor could be available as early as next year. ERIC TALMADGE (AP)

THE MYSTERY MEN: Badgley Mischka is no little old Russian lady — it's two guys, Mark Badgley and James Mischka. Above, some looks from their February Fashion Week show.

People

Inheriting the Throne

Lancome's newest spokesmodel is ELETTRA ROSSELLINI WIEDEMANN, and if she looks familiar, she should: Her mom is international hottie Isabella Rossellini, who represented Lancome for 14 years. Rossellini Junior attends college somewhere in Manhattan, according to the press release, and is majoring in politics, history and economics. Her first ads will appear in Asia at the end of 2006; she'll make her worldwide debut in 2007. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Beauty

Unnaturally Fine

PETER THOMAS ROTH UN-WRINKLE ($120, Sephora) is sold-your-soul-to-the-devil good. Within days, crow's-feet were smoother; in two weeks, they were nearly gone. Deeper lines around the mouth and forehead also decreased, and skin as a whole looked more taut, with an even, healthy tone. If you're not ready for (or can't afford) Botox, shelling out for this may give your face a new lift on life. K.P.K.

Dynamic Duo

The rock 'n' roll trench coat in black satin with a beaded skull on the back that closed Badgley Mischka's fashion show last season said it all: The boys were back. That coat announced that designers Mark Badgley and James Mischka were reinvigorating their label with more edge and energy than fans of their glitzy, glamorous evening wear might be accustomed to.

The design duo did, indeed, sit on fashion's sidelines for a few seasons before Iconix Brands infused Badgley Mischka with much-needed cash. Iconix (formerly Candies) acquired the label in 2004 from Escada, which had decided to pour its money into its own brand.

For Iconix, though, Badgley Mischka is more than a feather in its cap; it's more like the diamond in its ring. Besides Badgley Mischka, Iconix's other brands are mostly oriented to juniors and teens, yet Mischka describes it as "the suitor that was most suitable."

Together they've charted a course of swift but steady growth, including a return to New York Fashion Week, ads featuring the Olsen twins, and branded handbags and eyewear. A new signature fragrance just arrived in stores, and shoes are planned for spring 2007. This is an effort to court younger shoppers, as well as a more diverse group.

And with their spring collection, to be debuted on the catwalks Sept. 14, there will be a sportswear group for the first time. "There's always a little bit of day wear, but it was special orders, trunk shows and for our socialite friends," Mischka says.

They're also launching a new line called Platinum. It's slightly less expensive than the couture clothes, and includes dresses intended to be worn again, season after season.

The two men, both 45, do that finish-each-other's-sentences thing a lot. They even share a wide desk, sitting across from each other. They were in the same class at Parsons School of Design in Manhattan in the early 1980s. They clicked personally and professionally, noting they had similar taste and style.

They became players in Hollywood, dressing Halle Berry, Jennifer Garner and presidential daughters Jenna and Barbara Bush, among others, over the years.

They also regularly visit stores across the country for trunk shows, accomplishing a twofold goal: First, they say, they never know where they'll spot an incredibly chic woman as inspiration. And, second, when they show up somewhere in person, it dispels all notions that Badgley Mischka is an old Russian lady who dabbles in fashion. SAMANTHA CRITCHELL (AP)

Rain Bad. Trader Joe's Good.

GROCERIES | There were about 50 people crowded onto the 25th Street Northwest sidewalk near Pennsylvania Avenue on Friday morning for the opening of the District's first Trader Joe's store, which was punctuated by the sounds of a Hawaiian band and the tapping of raindrops. In a city long denied plentiful grocery options, the debut of this store is a milestone of sorts. One that for many District residents translates to: "I never have to go to Baileys Crossroads ever again."

After the doors flew open, many of the inaugural customers, who seemed to know one another, rushed in and crowded over the store's offerings — in one case, a bag of avocados.

Also in attendance that morning were representatives of a consumer force that has already made its power known on 25th Street: George Washington University undergrads, some escorted by their parents. "Make sure to come here once a week, Sweets. Promise me that," one mother was overheard saying around lunchtime. Unlike some Trader Joe's locations (We're looking at you, Bethesda), the layout is fairly simple and the aisles are wide.

GROCERIES | The public debut of the National Zoo's tiger cubs wasn't totally awash on Saturday.

TAI SHAN WHO? Meet the National Zoo's new tiger cubs, redefining cuteness.

Falling rain didn't keep the public from getting a return on their federal taxes in the form of cute animals at the zoo. Although lingering rain kept things cloudy for much of the weekend, it actually turned out to be really, really nice. The cooler temperatures of the last unofficial weekend of summer were welcome and were a signal that fall is coming quickly. To track the tiger cuteness during the day, check out the National Zoo's tiger cam at NATIONAL.ZOO.SI.EDU/ANIMALS/

Washington Post staff writer JOSE ANTONIO VARGAS was online Friday to talk about MTV's Video Music Awards show at Radio City Music Hall.

Al Gore, rock star. It sounded like he got the biggest ovation of all. What do you make of that?

Now that was interesting. Al Gore, who joked that he wanted to bring sexy back, got a huge ovation after his short lecture on the effects of global warming. As the cliché goes, you could hear a pin drop inside Radio City Music Hall as Gore spoke.

Is this show still relevant?

Please be sure to check out this week's Star, Us Weekly, People, EW, et al, to answer that question. And, as a moment of reflection, let me quote one of my favorite film critics, Anthony Lane: "What exactly is the point of Demi Moore?"

You were there, so tell us: Whose "money maker" looked the best up close between Beyonce, J. Lo, Xtina, and Shakira?

I'm biased. I've got a poster of Shakira — the hips, the voice, the fact she speaks more than four languages — on my desk. Does that answer your question?

It's true that Jessica Simpson can't sing. But she is NOT overweight. She lost a lot of weight for "Dukes," and put some of it back on. But my god, you people slam Nicole Richie for being skinny and then slam Jessica Simpson for looking normal!

Amen, amen. This is why I appreciate J. Lo. Bad outfit or not, she's got curves and [is] not afraid of them.

I haven't heard a peep about Jay-Z. Was he there?

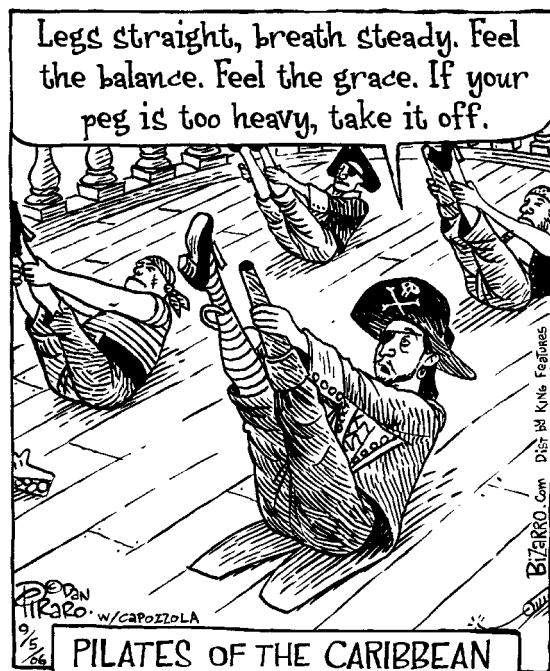

He was there all right. One of the highlights of being on the red carpet was seeing how tightly 50 [Cent] embraced LL Cool J before they got interviewed on Extra (or some show like that). I tried listening in to what LL was telling 50, but I couldn't hear a thing, and LL's body guard, who could give the best linebacker for the Patriots a run for his money, was downright scary.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try not to be too impatient and volatile; be tolerant of those who do not wish to follow your lead. Patience yields choice results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You're off on a new adventure—whether you feel you are ready or not. Now is no time to insist on going it alone, however.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) What works on your own is likely to be even more effective when you are with others you trust and whose company you enjoy. Mix and mingle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You'll very likely be where the action is, and you must be ready to take on more responsibility when the opportunity arises.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't rush through the preliminaries. It's absolutely essential that you be as fully and completely prepared as possible at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You may be feeling so confident and invulnerable that you'll be tempted by the ridiculous or dangerous. A friend will see you through.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) Now is not time to let others down—particularly Aries, Sagittarius or other Pisces. These folks are least likely to be understanding.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Make yourself available to others who are going through familiar difficulties, and you'll very likely benefit in ways you hadn't imagined.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is a good day to venture out of routine and comfortable surroundings into unfamiliar territory. Many lessons can be learned.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may be feeling as though you've been struggling for some time with little or no payoff. That trend is likely to change.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Now is not the time to plan too much; trust your instincts, and the guiding hand of others, to lead you into appropriate, enjoyable situations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Pace yourself. You cannot afford to run out of fuel at the wrong time—and you'll need those extra reserves when you least expect it.

Ride Safely, Wear a Helmet

I WAS DISMAYED to see a large color image of unsafe practices in the Aug. 29 Fit section. The cyclists depicted with the article “Cut Out the Car” were not wearing helmets. As a bicycle commuter and avid cyclist, I've had several tumbles myself and witnessed many others. I can assure you that no amount of talent or diligence on the rider's part can eliminate crashes. We spend years and vast sums of money developing skills that are controlled in the skull. Please cease promoting risking all that in such an avoidable way.

CRIME SCENE DO NOT IGNORE

HOLD OUR ELECTED OFFICIALS ACCOUNTABLE

IN TOO MANY PARTS OF PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY, OUR HOMES AND OUR FAMILIES ARE NO LONGER SAFE. Every year for four years, violent crime has risen in Prince George's County. Carjackings. Sexual assaults. Murders. Crimes of the most dangerous kind threaten our communities.

WHY? BECAUSE THE COUNTY HAS NOT HIRED ENOUGH POLICE OFFICERS. Statistics show that Prince George's County is more than 600 officers short of what is needed to adequately protect a population this size. The police are overworked and overwhelmed. And would-be criminals know it. It's time to step up.

IT'S TIME TO HOLD OUR ELECTED OFFICIALS ACCOUNTABLE. That's why concerned citizens and businesses, church and community groups, are all joining together and Steppin' Up to fight crime to keep our homes safe and our young people out of trouble.

EACH ONE OF US CAN FIGHT CRIME IN PRINCE GEORGE'S. Here's how:

- Keep an eye out in your community and report suspicious activity
- Become active in the lives of young people
- Hold our elected officials accountable

GOT ISSUES? DR. ANDREA BONIOR WILL HELP YOU SORT THEM OUT

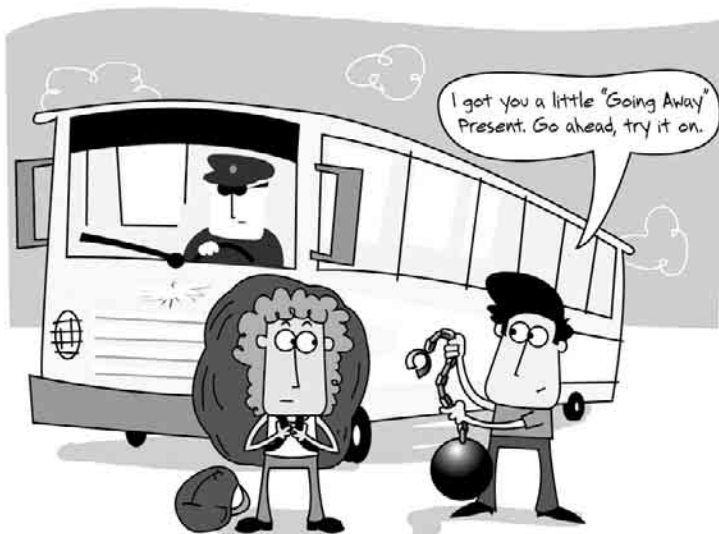

'See You When You Come Crawling Back'

Q My girlfriend and I met in college and have been dating happily for a little more than two and a half years. We've had our fair share of problems, but at the end of the day, we knew we had a special connection. Now she's going off to graduate school and wants to break up. I feel this relates to me being her first boyfriend. How can I show her I'm the one? Should I agree to the breakup in the hope the end result will strengthen our relationship? —DEPRESSED IN D.C.

In a word, yes — as long as by “in the hope” you truly mean just hope, not expectation or assuredness or “I’ll lock myself in a closet while listening to nothing but Wilson Phillips if it doesn’t happen.”

Assuming that the healthiest of relationships satisfy the needs, passions and goals of both people involved then, sadly, your relationship — at least in its current state — has a pretty bad case of the flu. Your affection for her is clear, but she wants freedom: The post-college years are the classic time to explore, rethink one’s paths, get those last ill-advised piercings and otherwise shake things up.

Let’s say you did beguile her into

ERIC REECE

Your relationship, at least in its current state, has a pretty bad case of the flu.

staying with you. Even beyond the obvious risk of her resenting you or doubting her choice later, what about the other danger — that it will stunt your own growth? Though I’m sure right now it’s nauseating to contemplate, taking time apart is something that will reveal itself years from now — whether you’re eating dinner together with your wisecracking teens or happily watching bad futuristic TV with totally different partners — as the best decision you could have made.

Q Is there a cure for a girl who consistently falls for gay guys? —NO, I’M NOT IN DUPONT CIRCLE

Yeah, it’s a small greenish pill, usually found next to the antacids.

Like any therapist worth her sensible shoes, I’ll tell you that the key to your “cure” is to find insight into why you’re in this situation. Is it that you’re afraid of commitment, so you fixate on unavailable guys? Is it that deep down you feel you’re not attractive enough, so you crush after men who will have a purely non-hurtful reason for rejecting you? Or might it just be that you haven’t been to enough Monster Truck rallies?

Or this could be a run of bad luck, a mere coincidence, a too-narrow checklist of what’s desirable in a mate, a deeper fear of relationships or everything in between. Figure out what you might be afraid of and fight it by opening yourself up to new experiences. And try hard to play against “type” — relationships involve a person and a person, not a person and a list of parameters.

Q How do you gently tell someone they’re dating a loser? My friend has been seeing this guy for several months. None of her friends expected them to last this long. He’s selfish, rude and ignorant. Plus, we’re pretty sure he lied about several small things here and there. She knows this, yet seems to be increasingly in love. We’re tired of pretending to be happy for her, but also don’t want to hurt her feelings. —ANONYMOUS

There’s no easy way to broadcast the “Your boyfriend’s a blockhead!” message without doing some damage. Plus, it’s not really how great this guy is that matters, but rather how great he is for her.

There’s no easy way to broadcast “Your boyfriend’s a blockhead!”

Granted, a “lying, rude, selfish ignoramus” doesn’t exactly sound like anyone’s Prince Charming. But my point is, your friend’s guy doesn’t need to be the bee’s knees to you to be a decent catch for her. Unfortunately, that renders your opinion somewhat irrelevant if it doesn’t directly relate to concerns about her well-being.

So, if you have concerns about how his less-than-stellarness is affecting her — she’s being manipulated, she’s picking up his bad habits — then air them. And if she asks your opinion, you can be honest (but polite). Otherwise, though, you’ll have to wait this one out.

How to Battle Boring Bottles

WHY BOTHER HYDRATING if you can't simultaneously accessorize? When your "American Girl"-loving daughter tosses that query in your face, kindly offer a water bottle from Rubbermaid's HipSips line ($10-$12, Target). Each one comes with a colorful wrap—the pink suede one pictured is "diva," but you can opt for denim or camo—that holds a photo and a mini change purse. Inside, your darling will find a tiny Sharpie and stick-on rhinestones so she can truly personalize it. To anyone over the age of 11 or with a Y chromosome, they're hideous. But if they get little girls in the habit of drinking their water, well, who cares?

Rhythm Method

CARNAVAL ISN'T HEALTHY, what with the nonstop partying and all. But if you isolate just the dancing, as Vanessa Isaac does for "Brazilian Carnival Grooves" ($15), you can get some good cardio. For non-dancers, this workout is a god-send: the moves are painfully easy and there's even an option on the DVD to learn them in slow motion. But regular movers will be bored quickly by the repetition—both of the steps and of the music.

Bring the Dentist Home

THAT ROUND VIBRATING THINGY dental hygienists use to clean teeth is so buzzy, so relaxing. Recreate the experience at home with Oral B's new Vitality rechargeable, battery-powered toothbrush ($20, drugstores). The Precision Clean model has a circular brush—all you need is a little pot of bubble-gum flavored tooth gunk and it's just like at Dr. Whoever's. The Dual Clean model sports two round heads while the Sonic, pictured, has a rectangular brush that vibrates extra-fast. The gizmo is easy to maneuver, clean and recharge; it was gentle enough not to irritate gums, but ploughed through stubborn cherry juice like it was nothin'.

Don't Kill the Messenger Bag

BEWARE OVERSTUFFING your kids' backpacks, we're reminded each back-to-school season. But what about all of the papers grown-ups have to lug back and forth from the office? Should we be worried about how we haul our loads?

We asked Dr. Raj Rao, a spokesman for the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons and the director of spine surgery at the Medical College of Wisconsin, who warned that there are 49,000 "luggage-related" injuries each year. His main rule: Be sure to restrict loads to 15 to 20 percent of your body weight. More than that could lead to the doctor's office. As to what conveyance is best, he lauds the rolling bags popular with travelers, and says that backpacks aren't bad if the straps are wide and the heaviest objects are at the bottom. And messenger bags? "It's best to flip it from side to side so both sides get used to the weight." OK, now you can go back to fretting about your kids.

Infants 6 months and up get sweet potatoes, pears and apples, and "super greens"; those 9 months and up can have five additional flavors. Sadly, babies cannot speak, so we had to ask adults to try Super Greens Multigrain. "It tastes sort of like Indian food"—specifically the spinach dish saag paneer, we were told. TrainReaction

Kicking Off

Q I'm a football defensive lineman and my season is about to start. What are the best training exercises for me and my position?

The power clean, bench press and weighted box jumps are my three favorite exercises for a lineman. Considering that the average football play lasts only about four seconds, a lineman needs to train for total-body power, lower-body explosion and upper-body strength above all else.

The power clean, which trains for total body power, involves taking a weighted barbell from the floor to the shoulders in a series of movements. All together, it should take less than one second. Ask a trainer to show you proper form if you don't know how to do it, or refer to "Essentials of Strength Training and Conditioning" ($69, Human Kinetics).

The bench press is a great exercise for upper-body strength. The Jammer machine by Hammer Strength provides a similar but better workout than the bench press, as you stand up and support your weight while you do it; find it at sports training facilities.

Box jumps can be done wearing a weighted vest and are an essential component for training a lineman's lower-body explosion.

Thai star Tony Jaa attributes his powers to honey and laughter

Although the world's newest anointed martial arts superstar could kill you with just a few quick movements, Tony Jaa won't do that.

Unless you happen to be stealing his prized elephants, as some evil Aussies do in the movie "The Protector," opening Friday. The 30-year-old Jaa, whose kick-butt mastery first drew international attention with the flick "Ong-Bak: The Thai Warrior," performs all of his own stunts without wires or computer graphics. Express' Vicky Hallett chatted with him (through a translator) to find out how he does it.

What drew you to martial arts?

It was watching films when I was young. I would watch martial arts films and mimic them to show off to my friends. Each time I impressed people, I tried even more.

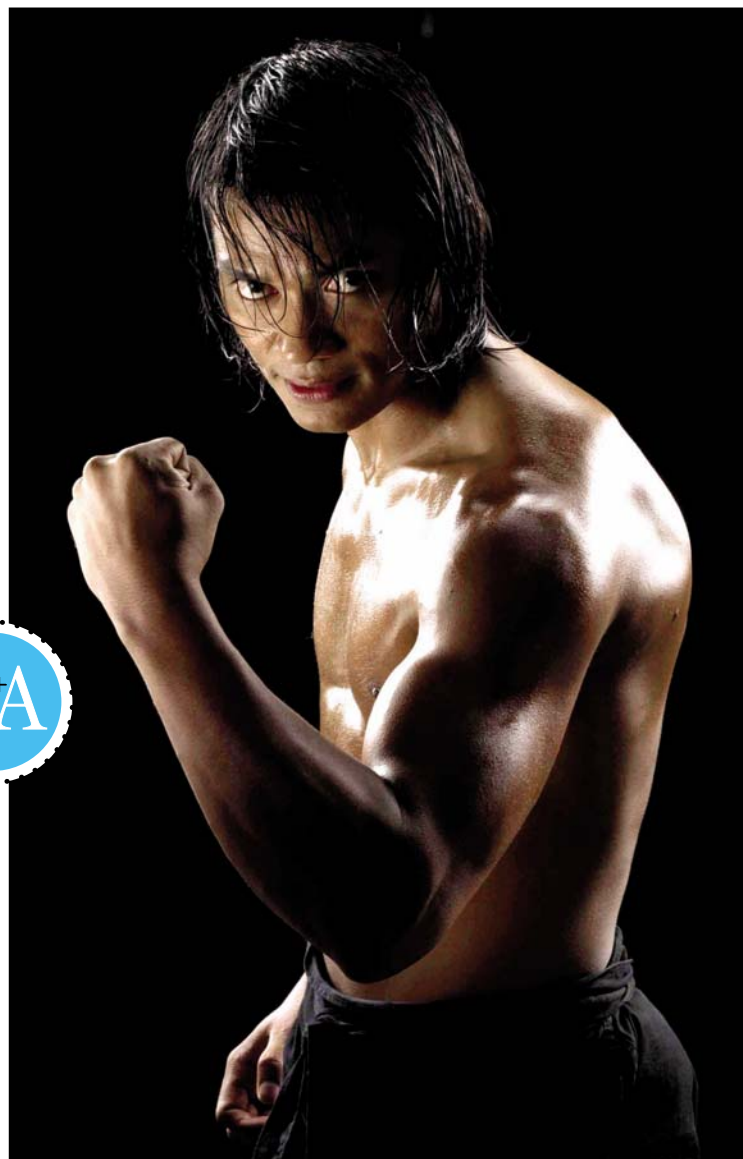

How much dedication does it take to get this far?

When I was still working as a water boy for my mentors, I was working on stunts on the side. I would get so inspired that I forgot to eat meals. Now I train for eight hours a day.

What does that entail?

I start with stretching a lot. I do calisthenics for speed. Then it's a mix of martial arts, Thai sword fighting, gymnastics and the most complicated steps of Muay Thai.

Which of those is the most critical?
The Muay Thai. It's like a dance and can be very meditative. But it keeps my mind free.

PETE TANG/THE WEINSTEIN COMPANY

What's the coolest stunt you do in the movie?

It has to be a scene in which I use my two knees to knock a guy from a helicopter. It's called "bird flying into the nest."

How do you not get hurt doing something like that?

It takes a lot of practice. Before any stunt, I practice to make sure

I'm confident and physically fit enough to do it.

Do you eat any miracle foods to boost your strength?

I don't have any particular food, just the five usual food groups, but I prefer Thai food. Before practice, I like to take hot water with honey. It

"I will tell each part of my body that it's fine. And I like to laugh."

warms me up to prepare for the day. And there are raw herbs that I believe give me energy. It's an herbal remedy recipe that my father also does. It gives you the energy to fly. It's not so much about what I eat. My power comes from my meditation.

Any moves you recommend?

Sit with your arms extended in front of your chest. Slowly tighten the muscles and then slowly release them. As you are tightening, breathe in. Slowly release and breathe out. Do this in the morning about 10 times. It's a form of meditation, especially when I'm tense and tired. It gives me new energy.

How else do you meditate during your warm-up?

Whenever I have time, I will tell each part of my body that it's fine. I'll say, "Today, foot, you are doing well." And I like to look in the mirror and laugh.

Smilin' Irish Thighs

The reel-world challenge requires complex footwork

After a few pints of Guinness, just about everyone thinks they can do a jig exactly like the folks from "Riverdance." But kicking and prancing around a pub doesn't have much in common with the highly intricate and disciplined dances prized on the emerald isle.

WHAT IT IS: The Culkin School, founded in 1997, promotes the idea that learning how to keep your upper body stiff while your legs entrance observers with lightning-quick movements is great exercise and entertainment. And it's also your invitation to a world of competition. Adults (and kids, who make up the majority of the school's 450 students) can kick up their heels and start attending meets within a year or two.

MOVES: Virtually every step requires that your hips be turned out with one knee in front of the other. So ballerinas will have a leg up for that part — figuring out how to loosen the hips can be tough for beginners. But the steps themselves are thoroughly different from ballet. The two most basic moves — and the ones you're likely to encounter in the first class — are "skip-two-three" (which brings you forward) and "seven" (which takes you from side to side in a grapevine-esque motion).

LINGO: First on the lesson plan are the three main forms of solo, or "step," dancing. Assistant instructor Megan Moloney says the jig is about bounce, the reel about power and the slip jig about grace. Once you grasp these concepts, you're ready for group, or "ceili," dancing (pronounced kay-lee). Then you might compete in your first "feish" (pronounced fesh).

WORKOUT: Your upper body may feel neglected, but your lower body — which handles most of the kicking, stomping and prancing — will feel get more than enough attention. "See how they have calf muscles to die for?" boasts Moloney, referring to some of her fellow adult team members. Core muscles will get some love, too.

CROWD: We know what you're thinking. These people must be Irish, right? But with a few exceptions, they're not. They're your average multiethnic crew, with an interest in other forms of dance, a love of the music or a strong desire to upstage other wannabe dancers at pubs. And like in most dance classes, the participants are mostly women. But there are a few guys hoping to steal that "Lord of the Dance" title from Michael Flatley.

GEAR: When you first start to learn, you don't soft shoes — gillies for women and reel shoes for men. Because you're pounding the floor so much, though, some students prefer to wear sneakers for the extra padding. By the end of a year of class, some may be ready to progress to the hard shoes, which are kind of like tap shoes, but with fiberglass toes and heels.

VICKY HALLETT (EXPRESS)

The Culkin School's 2006-2007 session kicks off Sept. 16. The adult beginner class starts Sept. 18 at 7 p.m. (Trinity Church, 7009 Wilson Lane, Bethesda). Call 301-593-9600 or see culkinschool.com or culkinadults.com for more information.

FORM AND FUNCTION

Sculling: The Heart-Healthy Workout

■ Rowing works almost every major muscle in the body, making it a great cardio workout. But it's also one that needs to be done with the proper form. Before you hop onto a machine, make sure you have the technique down. Think of the stroke as a dance, counting 1-2-3 and 3-2-1:

(1) Push with your legs. (2) Swing up your body by leaning back. (3) Draw your arms to the bottom of your rib cage, spinning the flywheel. Then reverse it: (3) Extend your arms. (2) Swing your body forward from the hips. (1) Bring your legs up after the handle passes your knees. In other words, on the back stroke, your knees should be almost completely straight before you squeeze your shoulder blades together and pull the handle to your sternum. Start with six sets of three minutes of rowing followed by two minutes of rest.

Research Study for Patients Experiencing Lower Back Pain due to Degenerative Disk Disease

- If you are at 18 years of age and suffer from lower back pain due to degenerative disk disease (DDD) untreatable by physical therapy, bracing, drug therapy or manipulation, you may be eligible to participate in a clinical research trial that will assess the safety and effectiveness of an experimental artificial disk surgically implanted in the lower back.
- The study lasts approximately 24 months. It involves 8 clinic visits as well as hospitalization and surgery for the permanent implantation of the artificial disk.

Don't Be Mad, Be Glad

■ Really angry people have another reason to be mad as hell: Long-term rage might damage their lungs. In a study of 670 men ages 45 to 86, researchers found that lung function declined as anger rose. Men with higher levels of hostility also saw their lungs age faster. The research, published in the journal Thorax, began in 1986. Anger and stress can work like allergens in the body, causing inflammation and triggering immune reactions, the researchers said.

Tiny Bubbles

■ Go ahead and chug soda until you drop — or rather, don't drop, not of esophageal cancer, anyway. A Swedish study of carbonated-beverage drinkers, published in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, found no association between fizz consumption and cancer of the esophagus or cardia (where the stomach and esophagus meet), even after 20 years, Reuters reported. That includes carbonated lite beer, too.

Or, Don't Eat Fat

■ Taking a sedate walk after a gigantic dinner may be more useful than it seems. A high-fat meal can briefly hinder the ability of arteries to stretch out to allow for increased blood flow, which isn't good. Researchers at Indiana University fed eight healthy 25-year-olds a fat-free breakfast, a fatty breakfast, then another fatty breakfast, this one followed by a 45-minute walk. The exercise helped arteries dilate, thus acting less like diseased arteries and more like healthy ones.

What Her Body Is Saying

Read the physiological signs to understand your partner's needs

Body talk is more than a come-hither glance and a provocative stance. As you give your lover the once-over, check for extra signs of what she's craving.

PUPILS: If she's feeling stimulated by you (not just sexually), her pupils will dilate. That's because her body is programmed to want to see more of whatever's exciting her, so her brain tells her irises to let in more light. Bonus: She'll start looking better to you, too. Research shows that men rate women with larger pupils as more attractive. Time to make your move.

EYELASHES: If she's blinking more than normal (about 15 times a minute), there's a chance she's on the pill; women on birth control blink 32 percent more than those who aren't. Aside from the obvious, what does that mean for you? Put on your toughest, most confident mug as you look at her. Because of the shift in hormone levels, research says, women on the Pill are more attracted to men with rugged features, such as strong, wide jaws.

BRAIN: Men and women get different kinds of buzzes from booze: Men lose inhibitions, while women become sedated. If you're looking to get her into the party spirit, don't feed her more alcohol. Instead, feed the jukebox. Research shows that mid- to fast-tempo music will make her more social.

Mid- to fast-tempo music will make her more social.

BELLY: Want to know whether it's a good time to broach a tricky topic? You can tell if she's relaxed by her breathing pattern. If her stomach pulls in with each inhalation, she's taking shallow breaths from her chest, which indicates stress. Keep your distance. If her abdomen and chest expand with each inhalation, she's taking deeper, more rhythmic breaths — a sign of relaxation. Go for it.

NOSE: Her sense of smell is sharpest first thing in the morning, which, aside from being a good reason to brush your teeth immediately, makes it the best time to impress her with your culinary skills. That's because 90 percent of taste is really smell. Treat her to a breakfast in bed consisting of warmed banana-nut bread, which has an aroma that, according to one study, increases blood flow to the vagina.

CHEST: Sex flush, a pinkish look to the skin of her chest, occurs during foreplay. It stems from changes in blood pressure and circulation, along with pulse and respiration rates. Think of it as her coy way of telling you that if you keep doing what you're doing, you just might get lucky. Another sign that things are working: A woman's breasts grow by as much as 25 percent as things turn hot and heavy.

SMALL OF HER BACK: As she moves toward orgasm during sex, she'll begin to arch her back. Hold her tight around the small of her back at this point and stay attuned to how much she's arching. And, for God's sake, do not let up; maintain the same rhythm and intensity of stimulation until she climaxes.

HANDS: If it seems as if she always has cold hands, it's because she does (almost three degrees colder than yours). Women's bodies are programmed to keep their cores warmer than their extremities. So wrap your arm around her waist to warm her core and allow blood to flow back into her hands. DAVID SCHIPPER AND LISA JONES (REPRINTED WITH PERMISSION FROM MEN'S HEALTH © RODALE INC.)

WHAT YOU COULD HAVE BUT PROBABLY DON'T

Do you run barefoot through the dirt in rural parts of Southern states? Are you coughing? Do you have abdominal pain and diarrhea? You could have STRONGYLOIDIASIS — aka, a case of the threadworms. Warning: Grossness ahead! Threadworm larvae enter a human's skin and hitch a ride to the lungs via the bloodstream. There, they head up through the respiratory tract and are SWALLOWED. This sends them to the intestines, where they grow up and lay eggs. The eggs hatch, and most of the larvae leave in the normal way things leave the intestines. But some stay behind. Thank goodness, ivermectin makes swift work of threadworms.

Coffee Talking

How to feel good about your Starbucks runs

Anything this good must be bad. That's the prevailing attitude when it comes to caffeine. We crave it. But we feel guilty about it, suspecting that sooner or later, it's going to do us in.

In reality, it's not the guilty pleasure everyone makes it out to be — so feel free to grab your mug while we set the record straight.

Long-term consumption is bad.

FALSE. That myth exists in part because smokers, who metabolize caffeine twice as fast as nonsmokers, drink more coffee. And smokers have more health problems. But nicotine, not caffeine, is the culprit. As long as you don't have high blood pressure, heart arrhythmia or anxiety, drinking caffeinated beverages for years is no problem.

It alters my body chemistry.

TRUE. Caffeine is a natural stimulant, and 250 milligrams of it — the amount in two cups of strong coffee — will triple the amount of adrenaline in your bloodstream, increasing your respiratory rate. In your brain, caffeine intercepts adenosine, the chemical that slows down our nerves and signals the need to sleep. It also increases dopamine levels, stimulating pleasure centers.

It makes me smarter.

TRUE. A cup of coffee before you write your performance review

Caffeine helps you work out longer before you start to feel sore.

isn't a bad idea. "It improves cognitive functions" by blocking that brain-slowing adenosine, said Dr. Joe Vinson, a food chemist at the University of Scranton.

It improves my game.

TRUE. In terms of athletic performance, caffeine "might be the difference between first place and last," Dr. Vinson said. It stimulates you to exercise longer because it keeps you from getting as tired, and it's also a mild analgesic, so you can work out longer before you feel sore.

It leads to bone loss.

FALSE. There's evidence that calcium is lost through urine, and by increasing the amount of urine you produce, you decrease your body's calcium stores. The effect, however, is negligible.

I can overdose on caffeine.

TRUE. But most of the documented cases are of people who have intentionally overdosed on high-powered caffeine pills (the lethal dose of pills is about 50). To OD on caffeinated beverages, you would have to down dozens of cups of coffee, hundreds of six-packs of soda and thousands of mugs of tea at the same time.

It is addictive.

TRUE. You develop a tolerance to caffeine over time, and when you no longer take any in, your body, expecting that daily dose, reacts with headaches and irritability. The more caffeine you consume, the more severe the withdrawal symptoms, but some people can get hooked on just a cup a day.

So, I can drink all the caffeine I want, with no consequences.

FALSE. A study found that certain people are genetically programmed to break down caffeine at a slower rate, so it places them at increased risk for heart attacks. Scientists believe that excess caffeine may lead to heart disease but that coffee's other heart-healthy benefits outweigh the risk — as long as the caffeine doesn't linger in your system. A safe limit is four cups a day.

It's in the Bag

Q I'm sick of eating out every day for lunch, but I have no idea how to pack a lunch at home.

In planning the best possible bag lunch, choose foods from three groups — protein, whole grains, fruits and vegetables. Try lean proteins such as tuna fish made with fat-free mayo or mustard, grilled chicken, low-fat yogurt or beans. Nuts, peanut butter and eggs are also good picks, in moderation.

Get creative with your grains — in addition to 100 percent whole-wheat bread, use whole-wheat tortillas or whole-wheat pita pockets for sandwiches. Look for at least 3 grams of fiber per serving on the Nutrition Facts panel.

New fruits and vegetables can add luster to your lunch. Blueberries, bell peppers, grapefruit and broccoli are all nutritional powerhouses and can be prepped the night before. Or, choose pre-washed, pre-cut veggies or fruit salad to save time.
